

In a news release Ted Dickman, BKD, LLP chief executive officer, announced Tim Wilson as the new national industry partner (NIP) for BKD National Construction & Real Estate (C&RE) Group in Omaha.

He replaces Jerry Henderson, who was recently named NIP for BKD National Manufacturing & Distribution Group.

Wilson is a 1986 graduate of Perkins County High School and the son of Rex and Pat Wilson of Grant.

Wilson leads approximately 160 professionals who serve more than 2,600 clients in the construction, real estate, architecture and engineering industries. He most recently served as regional industry leader for BKD's North Region, which encompasses Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado.

NIPs are prominent advisors who serve as the public face of BKD's national industry groups. They are thought leaders who display deep understanding of economic and regulatory trends within their respective fields.

They also act as the driving force behind business development efforts and as advocates for industry professionals on the front lines.

"Our C&RE practice has focused on developing our expertise to serve a wide variety of construction and real estate clients as they continue to navigate struggling markets," Wilson said.

"I truly believe we are well-positioned to assist these companies by connecting BKD resources with client needs."

Wilson has more than 25 years of experience performing audit, accounting, tax and management consulting services in various industries.

He is a member of Associated General Contractors and the Construction Financial Management Association.

Based in BKD's Kansas City, Missouri, office, Wilson chairs the firmwide C&RE Committee and is leading the implementation of BKD's firmwide Federal Acquisition Regulation and Cost Accounting Standards practice.
