An area family was grieving the death of fallen son, brother, uncle and friend, Marine Captain Travis Ford, who was killed in a helicopter crash fighting the war "Operation Iraqi Freedom." Ford was a former Grant resident, who also left behind his wife and young daughter, who at the time of his death, were living in California near his marine unit's base.

Keith Olsen brought top price, $14, at the FFA slave auction held in the PCHS gym last Friday night. He was purchased by Willard Jackman, highest bidder. Although thirty-some slaves had originally signed up, only a handful were present at the auction, since their fathers, grand fathers and uncles had already purchased most slaves, so it was advised that next year, no slaves be sold before the auction.

"The snow storm which we told our readers about in last week's issue continued throughout all of Wednesday night and Thursday morning. The snow was piled high in drifts, and all roads and streets were impassable. However, the weather since has been quite pleasant, and most of the snow has melted, leaving the roads dry and passable but quite rough in some places."
