

Adaline Linscott, nine, of Grant, participated in the America's National Teenager Scholarship Organization (ANTSO) Nebraska/Iowa pageant on Nov. 1-3 in Omaha.

Linscott participated in the Pre-Teen division and finished fourth overall. She also was second in the photogenic division and third in casual wear modeling. For the second consecutive year Linscott won the essay contest. Her paper had an anti-bullying message and how teens can change the future.

Linscott is the daughter of Tim and Deb Linscott of Grant.

America's National Teenager is the longest running premier pageant for teens in the U.S.

Founded in 1970, Miss National Teenager has graced the cover of magazines, television and national media as a role model of leadership, scholastic aptitude and service.

There is no swimsuit or mandatory talent competition. ANTSO focuses on the contestant, as a typical teen in daily life, highlighting what makes them special.
