

Dear Editor:

I recently had the opportunity to accompany Secretary of State Candidate Janet Stewart as she traveled in Nebraska's Third District. If you have the chance to meet and listen to Janet—perhaps, I should say the opportunity for Janet to listen to you—be sure to take it.

Regarding the latter, I noticed with what sincerity Janet paid attention to those who spoke to her as she made the effort to visit constituent groups and county clerks or election officers across the state.

Janet is uniquely qualified for the office of Secretary of State through prior state employment as Executive Director, Nebraska Commission of Industrial Relations and over 25 years as a corporate legal counsel responsible for project management, team building, business record keeping, cost-savings and quality improvement.

As a proven leader, Janet not only knows the law; she knows how to get things done.

Janet creates a unique opportunity for adding gender diversity to our state government—a fairer representation of the people of the State.
