

During the election season, we provide editorial space for voters to express their comments about upcoming elections and candidate preferences.

While that privilege is extended to voters, we typically do not allow candidates to use Letters to the Editor for exposure or campaigning.

Unfortunately, last week we allowed a letter to appear from a candidate for the Nebraska Beef Council, which is holding its district elections through Nov. 15.

We acknowledge our error and apologize for the oversight.

In the interest of fairness, the other two candidates will have the opportunity to submit a letter to the editor for next week's paper, should they choose to do so.
