

On Wednesday, Sept. 18 large crowds gathered at the overpass into Ogallala to watch the flooding that was expected to come from Colorado. The river was at a slow trickle by late afternoon with waters expected to rise by morning, Sept. 19. (Photo by Tim Linscott)

By Thursday, Sept. 19, water levels had raised considerably from the night before in Ogallala. The rushing water made its way downstream to other communities like Sutherland and North Platte. (Photo by Brooke Pankonin)

Supplies in Ogallala help residents fortify homes, stock up on sandbags as a band-aid