

Paisley Holmstedt isn't a big fan of seeing Santa this year. Holmstedt was one of many children that stopped to see Santa on Nov. 21 in downtown Grant for the annual holiday open house.

Brock Tines of Grant kept his hunting mask on while talking to Santa, but took it off for the official photograph for mom. Tines and many other children braved the cold on Nov. 21 to see Jolly Saint Nick as he was driven through downtown on a fire truck. Santa arrived at The Barber Pole to see the happy faces of a long line of kids wanting to tell him what the wanted for Christmas.

Nancy Reynolds (right) serves a potato to Archie Silvrants during the potato bar meal at the Perkins County Senior Center in Grant on Nov. 21. Reynolds showed off her holiday spirit with an elf hat and festive garb. Reports from senior center officials indicated that the crowd was a bit down from last year by about 75 people.

While taking photos of the children, I noticed that the children were very happy and were smiling for the camera.

The children were very happy and were smiling for the camera. They were also very excited to see the camera and were posing for the photos.

The children were very happy and were smiling for the camera. They were also very excited to see the camera and were posing for the photos.