

Pam Stenzel speaks to approximately 700 area youth on Sept. 21, educating them on “sex still has a price tag.” A program was also presented to parents the previous evening, educating them on how to talk to their kids. Her assembly at Ogallala Public Schools targeted age groups who need to be impacted by the reality of the many sexually transmitted diseases, pregnancy, and other emotional issues that arise from being sexually active at a young age. A few days after leaving the area, Stenzel began three days of bringing her message of the “abstinence advantage” to 10,000 young people in Johannesburg, South Africa.
